is not only a time when you discover who you are, "it is also a time when you discover who you are not."

It is critical to "see qualities in other people that you wish not to imitate" she said. "It takes strong individuals to stand up and do what they believe in, when it is not necessarily what everyone else may be doing."

Following Miss Cryderman, valedictorian Jessica McGinnis spoke of another fundamental key to achievement: hope.

She told "a story about a little girl," who had overcome the traumatic death of a loved one claimed by cancer. Never revealing the identities of the characters in her narrative, she said, "The reason that I told you this story is because I want to encourage all of you to never give up hope."

Hope, she said, would carry the class of 2007 through higher education, the military, family life, working life, and any the problems that may come.

Quoting Albert Einstein, she concluded, "Learn from yesterday, live for today, hope for tomorrow."
